

National Council for Workforce Education Conference Postponed

March, 2020

The National Council for Workforce Education (NCWE) annual conference has been postponed until July due to concerns over COVID-19. American Government Services (AGS) has previously been a sponsor of the conference, and are looking forward to attending in July. AGS President and Chief Technology Officer Derrick Edwards will be a guest speaker at the conference. NCWE provides a national forum for administrators and faculty in workforce education and basic skills to affect and direct the future role of two-year and other post-secondary institutions in workforce education and economic development. NCWE provides the link between policy and workforce education and economic development by providing support, research, and critical information to members on current and future trends and policies. By placing a strong emphasis on student success in exemplary programs, NCWE serves as the national leader providing resources and expertise to community colleges to enhance their efforts in preparing the current and future workforce in a global economy.
